2017

1.5 HOUR SEMINAR
1.5 CPD POINT IN THE
PRACTICE MANAGEMENT AND BUSINESS SKILLS STRAND

Many of us regularly deal in our professional lives not just with difficult clients and witnesses, but with distressing subject-matter: murder, sexual assault, catastrophic injuries, mental illness, the abuse of children....the list goes on. The normal strains of dealing with difficult cases can cause stress which starts to permeate into all areas of your life. Vicarious trauma is a phenomenon which is now well-recognised.

In this presentation you will learn about what vicarious trauma is; how it arises from a neuroscience perspective; signs that you may be suffering from it; steps you can take to minimise its impact, including practical steps to avoid or minimise the trauma to you of difficult or distressing material; how to notice signs that a colleague may be affected, what to do and how to intervene helpfully and effectively.

Robyn Bradey is a Mental Health accredited counsellor in private practice with over 36 years' experience. She consults to the UK Bar Training Advisory Council, NSW Bar Association, NSW Law Society, Legal Aid NSW and the NSW and Commonwealth DPP Offices as well as numerous other private and government agencies and organisations; she regularly presents to lawyers on a range of areas from mindfulness and resilience to mental illness and suicide prevention.
